The Trimmed Bonnets just received at Mrs. L. V. Davis's cannot be surpassed this side of New York. Be sure to see them.

Mr. M. R. Gilmore was in Lexington last week attending to some work in the beautiful cemetery at that place for residents of this city.

Walter Bagby of Quincy, while dismantling a house at Coal Grove, took a twenty foot tumble. One arm was broken and the other dislocated.

The Grand Chapter R. A. M. of Kentucky will meet in Louisville tomorrow evening. William P. Coons, formerly of this city, who is Grand High Priest, will preside.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.
Little candidates who hope
With an office to elope,
If to win you have a mind
Leave your characters behind—
In your wardrobes, stout and new,
Keep them hanging—do, now, do.
Little candidates who hope
With an office to elope,
As throughout the state you stomp,
Take advice; don't be a chump,
For the bulldog public tears
Reputations past repairs.
If an office you would find
Leave your characters behind—
In your wardrobe, stout and new,
Keep them hanging—do, now, do.

MAYSVILLE WEATHER.

What We May Expect For the Next Twenty-four Hours.

THE LEDGER'S WEATHER SIGNALS.

BLUE
White streamer—FAIR;
Blue—RAIN or SNOW;
With Black ABOVE—WILL WARMER
grow.
If Black's BENEATH—COLDER'll
be;
Unless Black's shown—no change
we'll see.

The above forecasts are made for a period of thirty-six hours, ending at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening.

Matter for publication in The Ledger MUST be handed in before 9 o'clock in the morning.

J. H. King succeeds the firm of King & McNutt at Aberdeen.

Miss Martha M. True has been appointed Postmaster at Dover.

Don't forget the meeting of DeKalb Lodge, I. O. O. F., tomorrow evening.

Have you the headache? If so, cure it by taking Chenoweth's Headache Cure.

Elijah Clark and Miss Sarah Dayton of Robertson county were married last week.

Richmond wants a new town clock. Maysville wants a new Courthouse and city clock.

Joseph Pogue, one of the Cincinnati firm of The H. & S. Pogue Co., died Saturday evening.

The marriage of Mr. J. E. Throckmorton of Bourbon county to Miss Eleanor Patton Powell of Mason will be solemnized at the home of the bride near Ewing October 25th at 1 o'clock.

Maysville now receives an "express pouch" from C. and O. train No. 2, arriving at 3:33 p. m. This enables us to get The Courier-Journal several hours sooner than formerly and is much appreciated.

The protest of the Lexington property owners has resulted in restoring the old rates of insurance on dwellings, and it is thought the companies will soon go back to the old rates for all other insurance. Now, what's the matter with a protest on the part of Maysville property owners?

THE LEDGER acknowledges receipt of a copy of The Eastern Kentucky Republican, printed at Grayson. The Editors are Misses Ara and Mollie Kees, and these young ladies not only do the brain work of the establishment, but they are equal to the task of putting the paper in type. We wish these brave girls that success which they so richly merit.

The Kenton County Grand Jury cast a bomb into the camp of the Covington poolroom proprietors Saturday which sets at rest all doubt as to the future existence of those establishments. There will be no more poolrooms in Covington—at least not for some time to come. Not only were the men who operate the rooms indicted, but the owners of the houses came in for a heavy dose as well.

R. H. Farley died at his home in Aberdeen, O., Saturday night, October 13th, 1894, at 10 o'clock of paralysis. In his 86th year. He leaves a wife and two sons—Bayless and Snell Farley of Aberdeen. He was a brother of Thomas J. Farley of this city, and was born in Bourbon county, Ky., April 30th, 1809. Funeral services at the house at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Interment at Charter Oak Cemetery.

During six days of the trotting-horse sales at Lexington 188 animals were sold for $25,000.

Jeff W. Smith, a well known trainer of trotting horses, dropped dead Saturday at Shawhan.

M. C. Russell & Son have just received a consignment of glass washboards, a novelty that is quite striking.

The Republicans of Robertson county will put out a full ticket, and expect to give Pugh a majority for Congress.

Rev. W. H. Spybey of Bellevue has been sued for breach of promise by a daughter of Rev. Z. L. Hazlip of Bowling Green.

The Greenup County Republican Clubs are publishing a sprightly campaign paper, "Solid Facts," and its name indicates its contents.

Lovead Tiedale Dean, one of Ironton's most prominent citizens and ironmasters, died Saturday afternoon. He was born at Taunton, Mass., September 6th, 1820.

The solo sung by Miss Bessie Barnes yesterday at the M. E. Church, South, is said to have been a wonderfully fine performance. Miss Barnes b.s fair to win fame in the musical world.

The Ripley Shoe Manufacturing Company's plant, which was recently placed in the hands of Receiver Williamson, was sold Saturday afternoon to Ed. Maloney of Cincinnati for $5,907.

Mrs. S. H. Poe is very low with typhoid fever and pneumonia at Flemingsburg. Physicians say her lungs are about gone. She has been sick four weeks. Her mother, Mrs. John Simms of Dover, is with her.

Notice.

The Dixie Athletic Clubroom will be open tonight from 7 to 11 o'clock. All members requested to be on hand. The public invited.

SENSATIONAL ELOPEMENT.

YOUNG "SOCIETY MAN" AND A BOURBON COUNTY BELLE.

Roe Stockton Takes a Sudden Departure, Accompanied by Miss Lulu Thompson of Paris-Society All Torn Up.

Eloped!

And married!

How romantic!

Miss Lulu Thompson is the daughter of Colonel James Thompson, a wealthy farmer of Bourbon county.

For some days she had been the pleasant guest of Miss Jessie Peed of this city.

With beauty and accomplishments and wealth she did not lack admirers, and there was a regular "sprint" between several Maysville beaux for the favor of her smiles.

A certain young Attorney seemed to bask in the sunshine of her affections, but, somehow or another, he paid "court" also to another young lady; and this was not pleasant to Miss Lulu.

This is one version, and it is said prompted the revenge which she sought and which has been so successfully accomplished.

Among the many callers at the Peed home was Mr. Roe, Stockton, an acknowledged leader of Maysville's 400.

One week ago yesterday Mr. Stockton was introduced to Miss Thompson, and the duration of their conversation was not beyond ten minutes.

He never met her again until yesterday forenoon, when he called with an outfit and they took a drive into the country.

It was 5 o'clock in the afternoon when they returned.

After tea Mr. Stockton and Miss Thompson made an evening call at the home of a relative of the former.

The hours waned, and about 10 o'clock Miss Peed received a note saying that her guest would not return—that she had gone—but it didn't say where or what for.

This information was not made known by Miss Peed until the family was seated at the breakfast table this morning.

Meantime Mr. Stockton had sent word to his employer, Mr. Simon Nelson, that he would not be on hand this morning to open the store.

Well,

A dynamite bomb isn't in it when compared to this explosion.

To make what will be a life-long story short, Mr. Stockton and Miss Thompson took the Eastbound train on the C. and O., and they have been hastily and it is hoped happily married.

Thus runs the world away!

The Young Regulars defeated James Rogers's picked nine Saturday by a score of 49 to 21.

William Humphrey's nine defeated John Clayton's nine Saturday for the second time, the score standing 14 to 4.

The Patriarchs Militant meet tonight at 7 o'clock. All are requested to be present.

J. T. PARKER, Captain.

The Mascots of the Sixth Ward closed their ball season Saturday by defeating the Spaldings for the fourth time by a score of 9 to 8.

PORTSMOUTH SOCIETY.

A Mason County Lady Entertained Handsomely By Her Hostess.

Saturday's Portsmouth Blade.

The Qui Vive was beautifully entertained last night by Miss Georgia Watkins with progressive euchre. Besides the members of the Club a large number of guests were invited in honor of Miss Hord of Maysville, Ky., who is visiting Miss Hope Watkins.

There were ten tables of four-hand euchre and twenty games were played.

Mrs. Leigh Watkins, who made the highest score, which was seventeen, won the very handsome first prize, a silver berry fork.

Mr. James W. Newman received the gentleman's prize, a beautiful bottle of perfume.

Consolation is always sweet, and Mr. Ed. Reed, for his adverse luck in cards, received it in its sweetest form—a huge stick of ribbon-bedecked peppermint candy as big as a barber's pole.

Ice cream, coffee and cake were attractively served late in the evening, after which the Club adjourned.

GROUND TO DEATH.

DREADFUL ACCIDENT ON THE K. C. SATURDAY NIGHT.

Joseph Shelton of Aberdeen Literally Ground to Death in Pleasant Valley Tunnel—Coroner's Inquest.

Ground to death in a tunnel!

Such was the fate of Joseph Shelton of Aberdeen.

The facts are about these:

Mr. Shelton was raising a crop of tobacco near Lexington;

He was not feeling well, and concluded to make a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Shelton of Aberdeen;

Saturday evening he left Lexington on train No. 12, in charge of Engineer H. P. Lewis, Conductor James Dunn, Brake-man L. P. Fronk, Baggage-master J. H. Dunn and Fireman H. R. Brightwell—as careful crew as can be found anywhere;

In company with Mr. Shelton was Mr. G. W. Hord of Lexington;

They were seated first in the ladies' coach,

But Shelton complained of feeling ill.

And at Mr. Hurd's suggestion both went into the smoker.

Shelton took a seat next the window, and the theory is that he raised the window and put his head out for the purpose of vomiting.

Just at this time the train was passing through Pleasant Valley Tunnel, where the timber supports are quite close to the cars.

In a twinkling Shelton's head was caught between the timbers and the car, the body of the unfortunate man drawn through the car window, and he was literally "rolled" to death between the car and timbers, crushing in the glass and light woodwork until the end of the car was reached, when the lifeless and mangled remains fell on the rear platform of the car.

Mr. Shelton's companion, as soon as the accident occurred, pulled the signal rope; but Engineer Lewis, knowing that the running gear of the train was all right, and being nearly through the tunnel, thought it safest and best to get out on the open track before stopping.

When the train stopped, the crew went to the rear of the car in which Shelton had been seated, and found his body hanging on the coupling-lever.

It was removed to the baggage-car, brought to this city and taken to the undertaking rooms of Q. A. Means & Son, where it was prepared for burial and sent yesterday afternoon to the home of his parents in Aberdeen.

Deceased was single, aged 23, and the youngest of a large family of children.

At 10 o'clock yesterday Coroner Roe held an inquest, when a verdict was rendered in accordance with the above facts.

LEGATION BUILDINGS.

UNCLE SAM OWNS SOME FINE ONES ABROAD.

Something About Foreign Representatives and Their Pay—The English Ambassador Receives the Highest Salary.

New York Sun.

It is the constant boast of patriotic American stump orators that the United States owns no territory outside its own borders, and does not desire to, but this is not strictly true. The United States does own a few patches of ground in foreign countries, some of them having been purchased and others received as gifts. These small sections of American territory are in the East Indies, Corea, Japan and Siam, and were acquired solely for the purpose of furnishing sites for legations in those countries, and there is probably not more than ten acres of this ground all told.

The policy of the United States Government is opposed to setting up pretentious legations abroad and expects its representatives to live in a becoming manner upon the meager salary allowed them.

So strenuous were the reports made in favor of the State Department securing permanent legation buildings in some of these countries that a few years ago steps were taken to acquire property at the cities mentioned and the erection of adequate buildings for the Minister and his attaches.

Now we have as fine legation quarters at Bangkok; Seoul, Corea; Tokio, Japan, and at one of the East Indian capitals as any country has. The legation grounds at Bangkok were the gift of the country, but the legation proper was constructed and paid for by the Department. The Seoul property was purchased at a very reasonable sum from Corea and a very unique legation building erected. At Tokio the Government owns one of the finest legations there, built after the Japanese fashion.

Great Britain, Germany and France have applied a general system of owning their legations in all cities where the Minister holds a certain rank. At the capitals of the five great powers all these countries control their own legations and the lands on which they are erected. Russia is following in their footsteps, and Italy, Spain, Austria and some of the South American Republics are doing likewise.

In Washington Great Britain owns one of the finest buildings in the fashionable quarter of the city, covering nearly half a block. It stands on Connecticut avenue, the fashionable boulevard of the town, and right across from it is the residence formerly owned by the late Justice Matthews of the United States Supreme Court, which the Brazilian Government has purchased for its legation. The British Embassy is one of the few that make any pretension to lavish entertainment during the gay winter season. A large ballroom was built especially for the purpose of the Germans and dances which are always given upon the anniversary of the Queen's birthday and upon other very formal occasions.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, the Ambassador of Great Britain, gets the largest salary of any Ambassador or Minister to this country. The English Blue Book states it to be $35,000, and in addition the Foreign Office makes an allowance of $30,000 for an entertainment fund.

Great Britain was the first power to acquire her own legation, and only in the last few years have other Governments followed her example. The French Embassy is now established in the old house owned by Admiral Porter, and in which he lived up to the time of his death. It stands a little outside of the fashionable quarter, and is only a few doors from the Metropolitan Club, where all the diplomats congregate during the winter. Jules Patenotre, the present Ambassador, who married Miss Elverson of Philadelphia last spring, was a bachelor during the first few years of his service here and lived in apartments alone.

Germany has, next to Great Britain, the finest legation in the city. The house was originally built by Major Ferguson, who now represents the United States at the Court of Norway and Sweden, and later was purchased by Senator Hearst of California. The entire property, land and all, was conveyed to the German Emperor two years ago, and now Germany owns outright her Embassy and about a quarter of an acre of land upon which it is built and the grounds around it. Additions have been made to the house, until now it is one of the largest in the city and admirably adapted for purposes of entertaining. The portico here is peculiarly German in style and is surmounted by the iron lattice work so frequently seen in Berlin and other German cities. From the top of the Embassy the German colors fly every Sunday and upon all holidays and anniversaries observed in the Fatherland.

Within two blocks of this Embassy is the Japanese Legation, which was acquired by Japan fifteen years ago. The building is unpretentious, and stands back several blocks from the more fashionable quarter. The Japanese colors are generally displayed on Sundays and all legal holidays.

But few of the great foreign powers place their diplomatic representative to Washington in the first rank. All of the European capitals outrank Washington, but of late years Great Britain has placed the United States alongside of both Germany and France in point of importance. The reciprocal arrangement by which the French, British and German legations, both here and abroad, have been advanced to the rank of Embassies will have much to do in future in the choice of the men selected to represent those countries in Washington. Foreign usage compels an Embassy to maintain more style than a Legation, and every country which has increased the rank of its representative to the United States has also had to increase the salary of the office.

This is one of the objections Russia has to raising her Washington delegation to the rank of an Embassy. Until she does our representative to St. Petersburg will continue to be a Minister; as only by practically mutual agreement between the two powers could the rank of the office be advanced. Russia's action in raising her Legation would have to be followed immediately by the United States in giving Minister Breckinridge the same rank. No increase of pay would follow, however, as in no case has Congress made any difference in the salary or allowances for missions to London, Paris and Berlin since they were increased in dignity and power according to the diplomatic view taken.

The French Ambassador here gets a salary of $20,000, and is allowed a liberal sum for contingent expenses. The Russian Minister gets about $17,000, or the same practically allowed our Minister to Russia. Baron Fava, the Italian Ambassador, has a salary of $15,000, and probably saves the greater part of it, as he was never known to give any large entertainment. For years the Minister lived in a very small house in an out-of-the-way section of the city. With the advanced rank of Ambassador he has rented a larger house, and it is said, will entertain liberally next winter.

There is a single gourd vine on the farm of R. Q. Davis in Boyle county that contains thirty-three gourds, every one of which is large enough to hold a half bushel of potatoes.

Wayne Dameron gave $5,000 bail and W. D. Hall, in default of the same amount, went to jail Wednesday at Covington. Both were indicted at Louisville, together with other prominent citizens of Catlettsburg, for using the mails to obtain quantities of goods under false pretenses.

The inquiry has been made, "What attracts the most attention in church on Sunday, the new bonnet, the dude or the giggling girl?" In our judgment a wide-awake baby with a sour milk colic and a hearty pair of lungs is the cherub that knocks all the eloquence out of the sermon and attracts the greatest attention.

Bishop J. V. McNamara is now lecturing in Camden, N. J. The Daily Courier of that place says: "Bishop McNamara and wife have arrived here after the trials they have passed through in Kansas City and elsewhere. Their crime was their defense of our Public Schools, and all the Nation has cried shame on their un-American persecutors. They begin lectures in Morgan Hall Tuesday night and hosts of patriotic people propose to give them a reception commensurate with their acknowledged merits."
